

Sakhya-Cambridge Friends of India invites you to an evening of

remembering the Mahatma

29th April (Friday) from 6.45 pm
Lecture theatre, Department of Pharmacology <http://www.phar.cam.ac.uk>
or see attached map for directions

Entrance Free

For more details about this programme,
please contact Anasuya at ac288@cam.ac.uk

2005 is the 75th anniversary of Mahatma Gandhi's famous 350 kilometre march from Ahmedabad to Dandi. The aim of this march was to draw attention to the inequity of the prevailing salt laws - which contributed to the deaths of perhaps millions of the poorest of the land - and to serve as a symbolic gesture of non-violent defiance of an unjust law and the imperial might behind it. Even today, this march stands out as one of the world's most significant and inspiring examples of non-violent political protest.

programme

Mr Tony Eva

Talk with photographic exhibition and film

Photographer Tony Eva followed the route of the Dandi march in order to better appreciate what the Salt Marchers had experienced and to see what landmarks remain as India enters the 21st century. Through his talk, Mr Eva aims to raise awareness of the work of Mahatma Gandhi and the Satyagrahis, and to remind people that political change by non-violent means is possible.

Dr Narinder Kapur

Talk "Gandhi - a personal view on some modern-day perspectives"

Dr Narinder Kapur is a renowned neuropsychologist, an ardent Gandhian and author of The Irish Raj, a book which tells the story of the close ties between Ireland and India in the colonial era and thereafter.

About Sakhya and the Speakers

Sakhya-Cambridge Friends of India, is a University society, and a registered charity that aims at benefiting disadvantaged social groups and individuals in India through the grant of funds raised here in the UK.

For more information please visit our website at <http://www.cam.ac.uk/societies/sakhya/>

Tony Eva is a Cambridge-based photographer whose media work has appeared in The Independent, Evening Standard, Metro and Direct Hit. His work has previously been exhibited at joint exhibitions in London at the Riverside Gallery, City Hall, and Piccadilly Tube Station and in Cambridge at New Hall College.

His photographic exhibition about the Mahatma was recently on show at the Nehru Centre in London and will also be showing at the Michaelhouse Centre in Cambridge (from 2nd May - 14th May 2005, Monday - Saturday, 09:30 - 17:00) and at the National Centre for Performing Arts in Mumbai, India. (Exhibition website: <http://homepage.ntlworld.com/tony.eva>)

Dr Kapur was born in Delhi, and came to the United Kingdom in 1952. He grew up in Ireland and for more than 20 years worked as a consultant neuropsychologist at Southampton General Hospital. In later years he was also honorary Professor of Neuropsychology there. For the past two years he has been at the Addenbrooke's in Cambridge, where he is a consultant neuropsychologist and Head of the Neuropsychology Department. Apart from The Irish Raj he has also authored books on memory disorder and brain damage. Royalties from all his books have been donated to various charities, both in India and Ireland. He is a member of the Gandhi Foundation in London and a founding member of the British Neuropsychological Society.